ADMINISTRATIVE OVERSIGHT

Florida Workers' Compensation Law is constantly changing. One of the primary sources of change comes through the regulatory process with the development of new rules and regulations by the Executive Branch concerned with workers' compensation. Oftentimes forgotten, this important source of change is not as closely followed as perhaps changes made by the Legislature or the Courts. The services provided by the firm in this category include advanced notices of rule making workshops, and when available, proposed rules and regulations. Once the rules have been developed and appropriately adopted, summaries will also be provided with changes in the rules summarized. This regulatory offering is unique to those within the industry and provides valuable sources of information to those involved in the workers' compensation system.
