BUSINESS/COMMERCIAL LITIGATION

Litigation involving a business is disruptive, distracting, and expensive at best. At worst, such litigation can be devastating to a company's ability to survive. Our attorneys practicing business/commercial litigation understand that while the potential costs of litigation must be anticipated in any business strategy, two other related ideas must also be taken into account: (1) defusing disputes early, saving a business time and money or, if a lawsuit cannot be avoided or defused; (2) being prepared to litigate the case to a final resolution.

The experience of our attorneys has evolved with the ever-changing complexities of the business environment in which our clients work and thrive. We are skilled at anticipating and preventing claims and conflicts and have trial, mediation, arbitration and appellate experience in nearly all kinds of commercial disputes. We know what's at stake: reputation, revenues, and even survival. We strive not just for legal solutions, but for answers that make business sense.

Some of the types of business litigation cases with which we have experience include:

- Breach of contract disputes
- Business interference claims
- Misappropriation of trade secrets
- Uniform Commercial Code (UCC) disputes
- Breach of fiduciary duty claims
- Non-compete agreements
- Corporate management disputes
- Employee-employer disputes
- Deceptive and Unfair Trade Practices Claims

No matter the dispute or issue, we strive to resolve the dispute in the most effective and efficient manner possible to best protect our business clients.
