CONSTRUCTION LITIGATION

McConnaughhay Coonrod represents general contractors, subcontractors, material suppliers, developers, architects, engineers and other construction professionals -- as well as the companies which insure those businesses -- in all types of construction-related matters. We also handle cases concerning performance bonds and payment bonds. Whether a lawsuit involves allegations of defective work, defective materials, improper design, breach of contract, construction liens for unpaid work or an injury which occurred on a construction project, our attorneys have the experience and expertise to effectively guide clients through the often complex landscape of Florida law. Some of the types of construction cases that we handle include:

- Bid Disputes
- Bond Claims
- Change Order Disputes
- Contract Disputes
- Defective Workmanship Claims
- Defective Materials Claims
- Defective Design Claims
- Injury or Death at a Job Site
- Disruption and Delay Claims

- Negligence Allegations
- Licensing Matters
- Insurance Coverage
- Enforcement of Mechanic's and Materialmen's Liens
- Professional Malpractice of Architects, Engineers, and Surveyors

Regardless of the specific type of construction matter at issue, we strive to resolve the dispute in the most effective and efficient manner possible. When such a resolution cannot be reasonably achieved, we stand ready to prove our client's case at a trial or arbitration hearing.
